Crown Attorney Richmond - Our firm represents and advises a wide range of large and small, private and public businesses about business matters. We even advise religious corporations and non-profit entities.

We work closely along with our clients in order to help them form privately held and publicly traded corporations, limited liability companies, limited partnerships, partnerships and sole proprietorships. We even assist our clients and their accountants to make certain that their business transactions are structured in a way that is the most tax advantageous. We take into account both short-term income tax considerations and longer-term estate tax implications. In our work with small and large acquisitions and mergers, we think about legal, business and tax implications while structuring acquisitions and de-acquisitions in the way most beneficial to our client's interests.

We could structure several equity arrangements, like re-capitalizations, for raising the capital of the businesses. The aim of our company is to guarantee full compliance of the laws relating to the SEC, securities offerings and state regulatory compliance.

Various services that a company could offer to our clients include: negotiating, drafting and reviewing capital business agreements as well as various arrangements like sales and manufacturers' representative agreements, joint venture agreements, non-competition, licenses and confidentiality agreements, distributorship agreements, and employment agreements. We are expert at drafting and preparing stock awards, phantom stock arrangements and stock options for chosen employees.

We have skill in helping family businesses with the transition of ownership to a later generation or a group of employees.
