

Aboriginal Legal Services Richmond

Aboriginal Legal Services Richmond - Tort law cases handle civil wrongs. Like for example, if you have suffered an injury or undue harm as a result of intentional wrongdoing or negligence by a different person, you could be eligible for damage compensation in a tort law case.

Negligence resulting in car accidents, medical malpractice and personal injury is the most common type of tort law case. Our tort law lawyers can help you determine who charges must be laid against and who is accountable for your damages. Even parties indirectly involved with an action that caused you harm may be held accountable for damages. For instance, the driver behind the wheel of a delivery truck might be held responsible for harming you in an accident, but so may the employer which hired the driver. Multiple parties can, in some cases, be charged with negligence for the harm which you suffer.

Our tort lawyers are skilled at trying tort law cases. If you have been adversely affected by a civil wrong, call us for an assessment of your case. We will help you to understand all your legal alternatives and guide you during all parts of the tort law case.